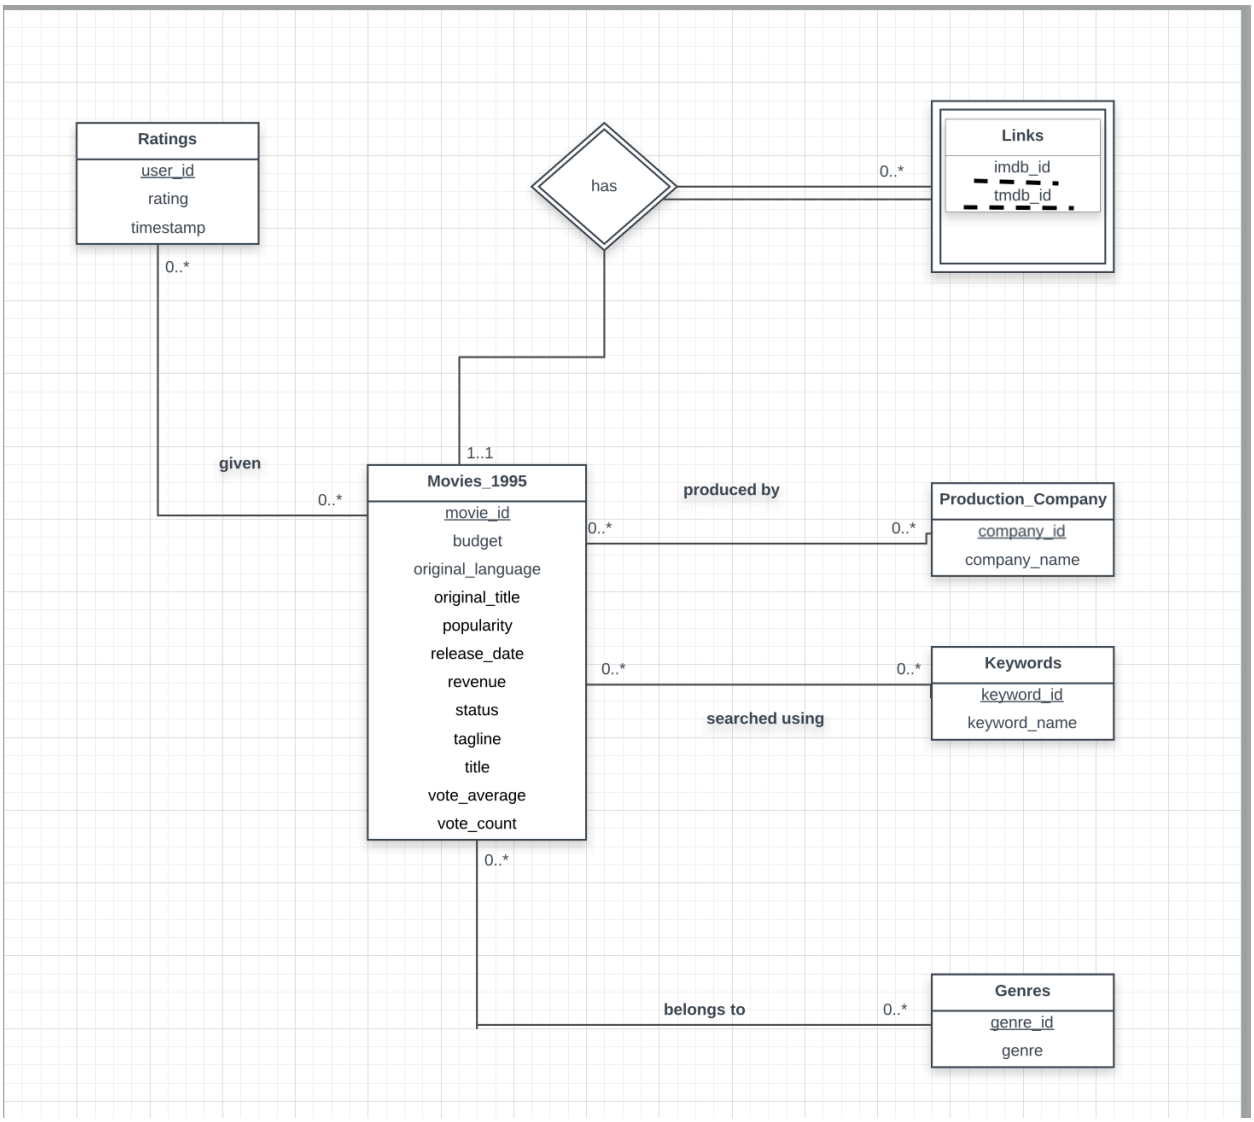
E-R Diagram:

No major changes in the E-R diagram while implementation.
The only change made is, in the previous E-R diagram submission, the key columns of all the tables had name like movieID, but while creating the tables we changed them to something like movie_id with an underscore character, instead of capitalizing ID



CREATE TABLE Statements:

movies_1995:

Python Script to handle JSON data and to filter data of the movies that were released in 1995

- The original data set that we downloaded , was in CSV format
- However, most of the files had data in JSON (Key, Value) object format.
- Also, original CSV files had metadata of over 45000 movies.
- For this project, data was filtered to contain metadata of only those movies which were released in the year 1995.
- After, filtering movies metadata, next task was to process CSV files which contained the data in JSON format, by splitting JSON object's key and value into separate columns.
- As an example, consider below row from originally downloaded, 'keywords' CSV file.

id	keywords
862	[{'id': 931, 'name': 'jealousy'}, {'id': 4290, 'name': 'toy'}, {'id': 5202, 'name': 'boy'}, {'id': 6054, 'name': 'friendship'}, {'id': 9713, 'name': 'friends'}, {'id': 9823, 'name': 'rivalry'}, {'id': 165503, 'name': 'boy next door'}, {'id': 170722, 'name':

- As it can be seen, Keywords are stored as {id, name } JSON objects. Also notice that the 'id' column of CSV represents the movie_id.
- We automated this task of data conversion by writing Python script.

#Python script to process keywords JSON object
import csv
import json
import sys
import re

with open('movie_ids_1995.csv', 'r', encoding='utf-8') as csvfile:
    movieIDList = []
    movie_reader = csv.reader(csvfile, delimiter=',')
    for row in movie_reader:
        movieIDList.append(row[0])

For loop to read each row of Keywords.csv

with open('keywords.csv', 'r', encoding='utf-8') as csvfile:
    reader = csv.reader(csvfile, delimiter=',')
    next(reader, None)
    cnt = 0

    # CSV file to write the processed data will be named
      'Keywords_data_processed'
    keywords_data_processed_file = open('keywords_data_processed.csv',
      'a') fieldnames = ['movieID', 'keywordID']
    csvwriter = csv.writer(keywords_data_processed_file, delimiter=',', dialect='excel')

    # For loop to read the 2nd column of the CSV which contains JSON
      objects
    for row in reader:
        if row:
            if row[0] != '' or row[1] != '[]':
                movieIds = row[0]       # Fetch the movie ID from 1st column
                keywords = row[1]       # Fetch all the JSON objects
      from the 2nd column

                # Fetch keywords of only those movies which belong to
      year 1995
                if movieIds in movieIDList:
                    keyword_with_double_quotes =
      str(keywords).replace("'", '"') keyword_with_no_apostrophe =
      str(keyword_with_double_quotes).replace('"', "") keyword_with_unicode_chars =
      str(keyword_with_no_apostrophe).replace('\xa0', '')
```

                print('KEYWORD_ID_STRING',
keyword_with_double_quotes)
                movie_keyword_data =
json.loads(keyword_with_double_quotes)

                # For loop to fetch each JSON object by parsing
each object one by one
                for record in movie_keyword_data:
                    all_key_ids = record["id"]
                    all_keywords = record["name"]
                    final_list = [movieIds, all_key_ids]

                    if cnt == 0:
                        csvwriter.writerow(fieldnames)
                    else:
                        csvwriter.writerow(final_list)

                    cnt += 1
keywords_data_processed_file.close()
```

- Sample output produced by running the above script,
- Here, we are only including movie ID and keyword IDs associated with it.

movieID	keywordID
862	5202
862	6054
862	9713
862	9823
862	165503
862	170722
862	187065

- Notice that python script also handles the logic to filter the data, such that, only data related to movies belonging to the year 1995 will be retained. This logic was included to avoid manual filtering of data based on 1995 movieIDs which would have taken a lot of time. It handles the logic of retaining relevant foreign keys and removing any extra data that can cause violation.
- Also using python scrip, we created metadata of production companies, genres and keywords.
- Using similar logic, we processed all the files which contained JSON objects originally.

(Listed below are all the python scripts used for the project)

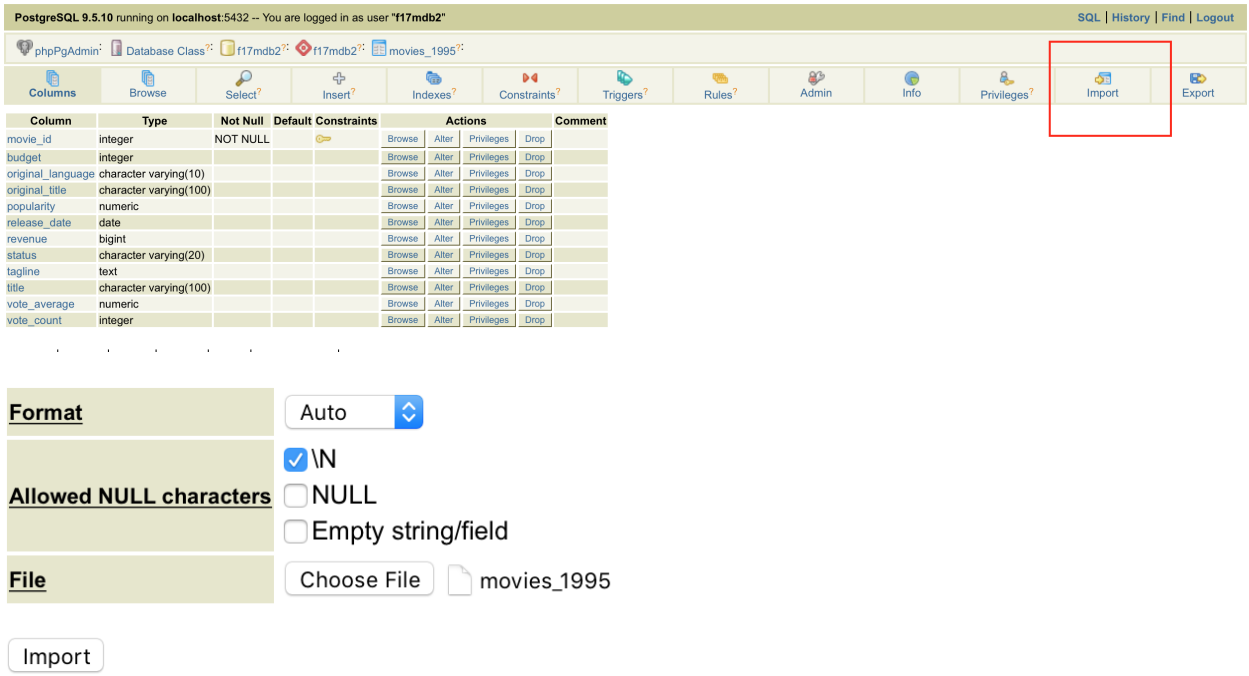
Data Population:
For data population, we used the ‘import’ GUI provided by web application of Postgres to upload CSV files of our dataset

To import data from a file, we need to create a table with correct datatypes.

Also, while uploading the CSV, CSV needs to have same column name as the table column name.

The order of CSV columns has to match with the order of table columns.



Success message is displayed after successfully importing the file.

1.Which movies are not rated by any users?

Answer:

SELECT m.movie_id, m.title
FROM movies_1995 m
WHERE m.movie_id NOT IN (SELECT r.movie_id FROM ratings r)

Rows Returned: 550
